My Super Normal Tuesday

A diary by Jamie, Grade 4 - Tuesday, October 14

Morning Disaster

Dear Diary, today I waked up late becuse my alarm clock was under my pillow. I dont know how it got there. Maybe I put it there when I was sleepy, or maybe my cat Pickle is doing crimes again.

I ran to the kitchen and made toast. The toast jumped out so high that it landed butter-side down on my math homework. Mom said that was not a good excuse, but I think it was a very sience kind of accident.

On the bus, my freind Leo told me he could hold his breath for ten minuts. He only did it for twelve seconds, then he coughed and said the bus air was too spicy.

> Important fact: Pickle looked extra innocent this morning. This means he probably did something bad.

The Rest of the Day

At school we had a spelling test. I spelled banana with four n's because the word felt like it needed more. Mrs. Green stared at it for a long time. I might get one point for being creative, wich should count alot.

At lunch I traded half my sandwitch for Mia's cookie. Then I remembered I dont like raisins, and the cookie had seven raisins hiding in it. I ate around them like a tiny cookie scientist.

After school, Leo and me tried to teach Pickle how to fetch. We threw a sock. Pickle looked at the sock, looked at us, and walked away. Then he fetched my pencil and hid it under the couch, so maybe he understood but wanted different rules.

Tomorow I will wake up early and be super organized. I wrote that here so Future Me has to do it. Good luck, Future Me. You are going to need it.

> The end. Probably.

I also saw a big green tree by the playground. It looked like it was keeping a secret.

Figure 1. The very suspicious playground tree.